ABOUT DR. GLORIA

Gloria Thomas Anderson is the founder and President of Heart Tones™, a ministry that provides customized, educational workshops and resources related to healthcare decision-making, end-of-life, and cultural competency. Considered a subject-matter expert in diversity, Dr. Anderson's natural warmth of authenticity helps inspire culturally different populations to be their best "selves." She holds an earned Ph.D. in education and has done extensive research on multiculturalism and diversity and its connection to the "self."

She has authored several books, including an outreach training kit and DVD that specifically addresses end-of-life outreach efforts to African Americans. Her CDC recommended booklet, "The African-American Spiritual and Ethical Guide to End-of-Life Care-What Y'all Gon' Do With Me?" (i.e., "The Guide") is the first of its kind and is now in its 9th edition.

The Guide has received outstanding reviews from hospices, healthcare organizations, churches and community leaders that attest to its effectiveness to help individuals, families and caregivers talk about end-of-life decision-making.

Dr. Gloria has presented her research internationally and nationally at conferences and other professional events, including the Research Association Minority Professors (RAMP), International Congress of Qualitative Inquiry (ICQI), and The National Association of Social Workers (NASW).
